Work History January 2008 - Present
IT Graduate, London University, London
Working towards my qualifications in this large educational establishment saw me learn many different technologies and systems. I qualified first in programming, in which I became proficient in Java, .Net and C++ programming languages. I spent one year on placement at Microsoft programming small applications for mail and chat programs. I was responsible for many add on features of the live chat service they offer via their mail service. I then qualified in data analysis and software testing, and completed a years' experience at sage where I was responsible for testing various pieces of concept software for compliance. I am very good at organising and time management so I would be a fantastic choice for either role, as I can marry many different ideas together. I have my finger on the pulse of the latest technology so anything I implement will have a very long service life, and I have the ability to keep it up to date and well maintained. I have excellent attention to detail and pride myself on doing things right first time. I graduated with honours so you can be assured that I will carry out my duties to the highest standard.

Education GCSE 10xA Grades including English, Maths and Science.
