Work History January 2010 - Present

Staff Nurse, Big Hospital, London

Working for this large inner city hospital as a Staff Nurse it was my duty to work on whichever ward to which my rota assigned me each week. I might be working on post-operative wards one week, then on a geriatric ward the next. Given that this always changed I had to be very flexible. My main duties were to ensure patient observations were done regularly. I was in charge of the restricted medicines and acted as a signatory for those.

January 2008- January 2010

Staff Nurse, Stupa, London.

I worked for this large private hospital as a staff nurse. My main duty was to ensure that all post-operative patients were taken care of, and in good health following operations. The role involved dressing wounds and incisions, giving advice and reassurance to patients, and ensuring that their treatment was as successful as possible. I would occasionally have to conduct outpatient appointments.

January 2007 – January 2008

Staff Nurse, NHS little unit, London

Working for this small community hospital it was my duty to ensure that patients admitted with complications following surgeries were made as comfortable as possible and got the correct treatment to put things right. It involved a lot of blood testing, wound dressing and changing, and cleaning. I also had to ensure that all medications were administered to patients when required.
